My Music! ->

White shirts don't mix with blood

I like blind faith on a cracker
Your eating with glee
You wash it down with a matyr
And a pint of kerosene

So You keep digging your grave
Until you are clean
Twist and contort your body
To shapes first thought unseen

She took me to a movie
A friend said another killed themselves
That was a lie.
She took me to another movie
A woman summoned a bird from a picture of a tiger
That was true.

A child would call it evil.
A man would call it justified.

I work at an auction house that sells antiques. Here is some cool stuff we have sold

- Uranium Glass
- A Coffin
- A White Stripes poster
- Speed Tablets from WWII
- The Official Phantom Tea Pot
- The Worlds First Commercial Vibrator
- Human Teeth
- A Hand Grenade

Did you know that French house music has nothing to do with French houses ? I mean a lot of it was probably made in houses in France but that's the only correlation I'm willing to concede.

And there it lay,
Writhing around like a tentacle,
Leaking its filth as far as it could,
Screaming for a love it would never find.

But like a god, we can only perceive an inhuman concept as human itself.

Now I wonder what she was, was she someone I loved ?
Was she how I wanted see myself ? Whatever it was, it wasn't human.

She held me close, and i disappeared into her.

like her shadow was being chased by the sun.

When she walked a slick trail would follow behind if only a moment,

It dropped from her brow and down her shoulders to her body,

Her hair was like a fountain of oil, thick and black and so deep it disappeared into its surroundings.

WE LISTENING TO WISH YOU
ON A BUS THROUGH WHAT FEELS LIKE RURAL ENGLAND.

Vast plains of desolation
A fragment of Britain
Brick and stone
A green seaside village
Thrown into a field of fire
Factories between houses
Nothingness between space
Great chasms of trees
Abandoned Churches stand at the crest
And the homes are square
And yet it means everything to someone
Maybe me
